The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s escapades and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime and is told by a neighbor that he has been skipped school that afternoon and spent most of the time in town, and that Aunt Polly is satisfied with what she has heard and does not think Tom is a bad boy, but just needs a good thrashing. While wandering the streets of St. Prudens, Tom sees a man with a horse and buggy, and is tempted to pick his pocket. However, Tom’s sense of honor and respect for a gentleman prevents him from doing so.

Tom goes out of the house and proceeds to a nearby store to buy some candy. He is instructed by the store owner to make sure that the candy he buys is of good quality and that he does not make a mess. Tom follows the store owner’s instructions and eventually cleans the mess from the floor.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Tom knows by now that he cannot escape doing this task, and he decides to take on the job and do it as well as he can. Tom-Lineage
