The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out dramatically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom's mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime and tells Aunt Polly about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom and the new arrival eat heartily; Tom and the new arrival eat heartily. Uncle Mark. Tom has served the aunt herself to dispense his money. The new arrival is surfeited and extravagant. Tom goes out of the house to whet his appetite and eventually chases the new arrival all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a "white alley," a kind of miracle. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his trowel.

Tom comes home at suppertime. He is schoolmaster now, and talks about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly asks him about his school and what he has been up to. Tom tells her about the boys he has been playing with and how they skipped school that afternoon and went into town. Aunt Polly looks at Tom with a mixture of love and annoyance. She asks him if he still drinks his coffee from the chair, but Tom says he hasn't been doing that for a while.

Tom and the new arrival eat supper. Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom has learned the art of self-defense and doesn't need her help anymore. The two of them finish supper and eventually choose the nursery all the way down to the basement.
